

ELECTIONS

GOVERNMENT DIVISION

By design and legal requirement, election cases move on a “rocket docket,” so when there is an election challenge in your Florida municipality, whether before State or Federal court, we are ready. Since we have a core local government law practice, we have the experience to handle your problem without hesitation and bring to the table the know-how to devise and implement a winning strategy.

We have successfully represented municipalities in election challenges in Florida and federal courts, including cases challenging ballot initiatives and election results. We have also successfully handled mandamus and injunction matters arising out of elections all the way through appeal to Florida’s highest courts.

In addition, we have represented elected officials in high-profile injunction cases. These types of matters not only attract media attention that needs to be managed but expose officials to ethics investigations that require legal guidance, both of which our experienced government lawyers are uniquely qualified to provide.
