Scott represents clients in insurance and workers' compensation defense, as well as sports, arts, and entertainment matters.

Before joining the firm, Scott served as Associate General Counsel for a property insurance company, managing high-exposure first-party property insurance disputes from inception through trial. His experience includes conducting depositions, drafting motions and other litigation filings, overseeing discovery, and representing the company in mediations and settlement negotiations. Scott second-chaired jury trials, assisting with trial strategy, witness preparation, and courtroom presentation. He also worked at a Florida-based civil litigation firm, where he handled motion practice, discovery, and trial preparation.

Prior to beginning his legal career, Scott worked as a music producer, gaining firsthand experience in the creative and business aspects of the entertainment industry. After becoming an attorney, Scott transitioned into an advisory role, working with local recording artists and producers on drafting and negotiating recording, production, and other entertainment-related agreements. His experience also includes negotiating branding opportunities and sponsorship arrangements, advising on contractual disputes and
