Diana brings to her clients more than a decade of experience in insurance representing insurers, companies, and individuals, both domestically and in the London markets. Her practice is focused predominantly on litigating insurance coverage issues related to property and casualty, general liability, marine, bad faith, and breach of contract claims in state and federal courts.

Diana's practice also focuses on the rapidly growing gig economy sector, including representing in personal injury lawsuits independent contractors affiliated with some of the largest gig economy companies. Diana's coverage background gives her a unique perspective and understanding of the novel issues that arise in the gig economy space. She specializes in pre-suit investigations and full-service litigation of complex and catastrophic personal injury matters involving motor vehicle accidents.

Diana is a strategic partner for her clients, advising them on potential liability and providing legal recommendations through extensive litigation reports and coverage opinions. In 2019, Diana spent six months on secondment in London with a Lloyd's syndicate learning about the intricacies of the London market and advising claims adjusters and underwriters on U.S. law, including policy wording,
